

Medical Advisor (Oncology) – Australia

- Top 5 Multinational Pharmaceutical
- Oncology Portfolio – Rich, Exciting Pipeline
- Industry Experience
- Based in Sydney, Australia

You will be joining a dynamic, highly motivated team with a strong vision to shape and develop an emerging oncology franchise. You will be a critical contributor to the success of the oncology portfolio which will be driven by your strong scientific/clinical skills, your excellent communication skills and commercial acumen. Your responsibilities will flow across both clinical and business dimensions with one of your goals to become a credible and reliable partner to the Australian medical community by advocating the highest ethical and scientific standards.

A newly created role, this role is critical in establishing relationships, so that the company builds its product and technology leadership through scientific innovation in its Oncology portfolio. If you have previous experience in Oncology this would be highly valued within the organisation and allow you to have a significant impact on shaping future direction of the portfolio.

To be successful in this role, you will draw upon your in-depth scientific and medical knowledge, gained through your medical training (MBBS) and experience within the pharmaceutical industry. You can effectively support Clinical Research and cross-functional colleagues with your expertise and collaboration.

Naturally, you will have a flair for strategic and innovative thinking as well as having broad business understanding (both generally and within your portfolio), including a strong knowledge of the drug development process.
